

MODERN TECH™

Contemporary Insulated Steel Garage Doors

HÖRMANN NORTHWEST DOOR

Construction:

The new Modern Tech steel garage door is built using Northwest Door's time proven sandwich-type construction, a construction method unparalleled in strength. A 24 gauge steel smooth exterior skin and a stucco embossed interior skin are pressure laminated to a 2 inch thick R10.4 expanded polystyrene core (EPS) using urethane adhesive. This forms a natural thermal barrier or Thermal Break. (A thermal break reduces the transmission of cold or hot air from one side of the door to the other).

20 gauge steel backer plates are toggle locked to the inside of the back skin prior to assembly for attaching door hardware. Flexible seal is added at section joints to minimize air infiltration. Heavy-duty 18 gauge steel end caps are secured to each end of the door sections. R12 insulation is an available option. Doors are available in four standard colors, interior color on all doors is Bright White (see color samples below).

Modern Tech doors are available in any width up to 18 feet wide in one inch increments and heights up to 14 feet using 24, 21 and 18 inch high door sections.

Doors are equipped with standard lift bracket mounted track, a 10,000 cycle torsion spring counterbalance system and 10 ball nylon rollers. All on-door operational hardware is galvanized and secured to door sections with zinc plated fasteners. Manual push-up operation is standard, optional electric operation recommended. Optional extended life cycle, high lift, low clearance and powder coated finish hardware are available.
